IS THIS ADDLESTONE’S NEOLITHIC CAUSEWAYED CAMP?
A POSSIBLE DOUBLE DITCHED ENCLOSURE AT ADDLESTONE

David Barker

A feature noted on a RAF survey of December 1945 published online on ‘Google Earth Historical Imagery’ bears a marked resemblance to plans of Neolithic causewayed enclosures, and the eye of faith may even discern the presence of interrupted ditches. Most of the earthwork (TQ 06456505), if such it is, remains intact, but largely below the Meadowlands Park mobile homes estate and there could be damage to its southern extent by the by-pass road shown in its initial phase of construction on the aerial photograph.

Its location adjacent to several watercourses and the nearby Thames bears a marked similarity with the Neolithic causewayed camp of Yeoveney, north of Staines that was discovered from aerial photographs of 1946 and excavated in the early 1960’s (Robertson-Mackay 1987). The size of the Addlestone enclosure is difficult to estimate in view of the lack of definition of its southern half and the propensity for oblateness of the known enclosures of this type, but a reasonable estimate suggests a feature with an external ditch diameter of c170m, about the same as that of Yeoveney.

If the loss of definition of the complete circuit of the earthwork was due to waterborne erosion its location would also correlate with other sites showing geographical connections with water and the confluences of major and minor rivers. Its distance from those of Yeoveney and Eton Wick may also be noted on the basis that it may have had some proto-territorial significance. If this was the case then perhaps another may be sought in the vicinity of the Mole confluence with the Thames (Bird et al, 95).

Many Neolithic artefacts have been collected from the adjacent stretch of the River Wey, and if this site is proven to have been a Neolithic enclosure it would provide a more tangible focus for these local discoveries.

An alternative scenario is that the crop marks are merely chance markings of similar outline, but of later date, although initial enquiries are not suggestive of war-time fieldworks, gun emplacements or similar activity at this strategic position. Likewise, any possible contemporary or earlier use of the area for animal husbandry does not seem to produce the appropriate layout as seen in the image.

Without further investigation all that can be said is that marks on an aerial photograph seem to show a feature that closely resembles what might be expected of a Neolithic causewayed enclosure.

As well as the more formal introduction to the possible Addlestone Causewayed Enclosure members may be interested in the circumstances surrounding the discovery of this major feature. At the conclusion of the Society Publication Committee meeting held on the 16th January 2011, Ian Mawson demonstrated the feature contained on Google Earth called ‘Historical Imagery’. This application, which can be downloaded along with the other features of the site, was duly displayed on screen. The particular image on view was the 1945 RAF aerial survey covering our area. Seen from a distance of 12 feet the distinctive outlines of a crop mark were observed. Closer inspection confirmed that there was indeed the distinctive outline of a double ditched enclosure. Further investigation of the website which also contains other much more recent air surveys covering the same area demonstrated that the clear image of 1945 was not visible at a later date. As well as confirming the importance of not relying on single surveys to confirm archaeological features, this demonstrates how grateful we all are to Google for facilitating the discovery and, once again, how the Society owes its debt to Ian for initiating the find in the first place.

It is also worth recording that the County Archaeologists were unaware of this part of the website so perhaps we can all look forward to many more previously unknown sites being located in the county.
Much may be made of this potential discovery in the future, however the eureka moment for our local archaeology was a cause of considerable pleasure! We may well now have a distinct focus for the earliest regular habitation of our area which, by analogy with other similar sites, is part of a much larger integrated prehistoric landscape. As already noted the strong relationship between such sites and watercourses is perhaps further consolidated. The remarkably sinuous Wobourne and confluence of arms of the Bourne and the Wey immediately adjacent to the site surely further advances the theory of water connections with Neolithic religion. The story of prehistoric Addlestone may be much more important and complex than we could ever have imagined only a few months ago - who knows what may turn up the next time a computer is switched on!

RESEARCH COMMITTEE

MARGARY AWARDS

At the Research Committee Annual Symposium held on Saturday 26th February 2011. The Margary Award winners were:
First: Spelthorne Archaeology and Local History Group, represented by Nick Pollard
Second: Leatherhead and District Local History Society, represented by David Hartley

Richard Savage led the panel of judges and presented the awards. He said the judges had been very impressed by the quality of research in all the exhibits and it had been difficult to decide the winners.

MEDIEVAL STUDIES FORUM

The meeting provisionally arranged for 5th November 2011 has been postponed.

VILLAGES STUDY GROUP

AUTUMN MEETING
1st October
Surrey History Centre, Woking

The programme is as follows:

10am        Registration
10.30        David Taylor to open the proceedings
10.35        Mining maps and documents for evidence David Young and Sally Jenkinson will give an extended version of the presentation first given at Ashtead in February.
             This will be followed by a practical workshop session led by Richard and Pamela Savage on using Tithe records in village studies.
12.30        Lunch (Tea & Coffee available)
1.30pm       Digging for evidence Richard Savage on test-pitting, featuring what new evidence has come to light in Old Woking in 2010/11 and demonstrating how this changes the interpretation of the development of the settlement.
2pm          Three 20-minute updates from current projects, including Bookham, Ockham and Esher.
3 to 3.30pm  Discussion Forum
4pm          SHC closes promptly

Charge for the meeting will be £6.

Application forms will be sent to all members of the Villages Study Group. Others members of the Society are welcome and may apply for places to Jo Richards, mai to: jomrichards@yahoo.co.uk
PREHISTORIC GROUP

AGM LECTURE
October 26th, 7.30pm
Dorking Christian Centre

The Prehistoric Group AGM will be followed by a series of short reports on work done by members of the group over the last two years, much of which is now coming to fruition. All are welcome.

There will be a small charge of £2 at the door to cover costs.

SURREY LOCAL HISTORY COMMITTEE

SURREY’S SPORTING LIFE
Saturday 22nd October
Shalford Village Hall

In keeping with the run up to the Olympics, the theme of this years’ symposium is Surrey’s Sporting Life’, but non-sporting enthusiasts will not be disappointed as the programme has something for everyone.

The programme will open with Lesley Ronaldson, a Real Tennis professional, from Hampton Court who will talk about Tudor sports and pastimes. She will be followed by Jim Faulkner from the Surrey County Playing Fields Association who will tell us about Surrey playing fields from King George V to Queen Elizabeth II. In the afternoon we have Phil Cooper from the Surrey History Centre) talking about ‘The 1948 Olympic torch run through Surrey’ and Matthew Alexander on ‘Shrovetide football in Surrey’. The afternoon will conclude with Mike Fanya giving a humorous look at cricket in Surrey. We also hope to have a short film from the South East film archive.

Local History Societies are invited to put on displays and the Gravett Award will be made for the best display.

Tickets: £10 in advance, or £12 on the door and are available from Mrs J Balchin, Hullbrook Cottage, Cranleigh Road Ewhurst GU6 7RN

Please see enclosed flier for full programme

SURREY WOODLANDS

The Local History Committee’s Spring Meeting took place at Shalford Village Hall on Saturday May 21st on the subject of ‘Surrey Woodlands’. Rob Davies from Surrey Wildlife Trust spoke about Ancient Woodland and how tithe maps, and other historical sources have been an invaluable resource for updating the Surrey Ancient Woodland Inventory. He was followed by Chris Matcham, also from Surrey Wildlife Trust who gave a talk about traditional woodcrafts. After a break for tea, we had a talk on the Conservation and Management of Historic Woodland by Sean O’Kelly, a ranger from Ashtead Common. A display of beautifully illustrated posters on Medieval Woodland was provided by Bourne Hall Museum.

MISCELLANY

CHURCH FONTS

I am preparing a book for the Somerset Archaeological and Natural History Society on the church fonts in the county of Somerset drawn and recorded by Harvey, or William Harvey Pridham (1886-c1908). In his notes he recorded that he also worked on recording fonts in Berkshire, Bristol, Dorset, Essex, Gloucestershire, Hampshire, Middlesex, Monmouthshire, Oxfordshire, Surrey, Sussex and Wiltshire. The collections for Wiltshire and Berkshire have been located but does anyone know of the whereabouts of the drawings and description of fonts relating to the other counties prepared by Pridham? He may not have recorded every font in every county, but any information is very welcome on his work, especially details of his death.

ST MARY’S, BARNES: ARCHAEOLOGY BOOK LAUNCH
Andrew Summers, Chairman, The Friends of St Mary’s Barnes

It has taken nearly 30 years but the illustrated book of the archaeology of St Mary’s Church will at last be launched on Friday 9th September 2011.

A full archaeological investigation was carried out after the fire in 1978 which almost totally destroyed the church (which was then rebuilt) and English Heritage have now provided funding for the report to be published in the Surrey Archaeological Society Collections and for special offprints.

Ted Cullinan, award-winning architect of the new church, will be attending, as will Canon Juergen Simonson who was Rector of Barnes at the time of the rebuilding.

The event starts at 7pm with an archaeological tour and a lecture by the book’s authors Bob Cowie and Scott McCracken followed by wine.

Tickets: £10, to include a free copy of the book, from office@stmarybarnes.org or Tel: 020 8741 5422.

SHAHT RECEIVES CONSERVATION AWARD

The 2011 Conservation Award of the Surrey Industrial History Group was presented to the Surrey Heath Archaeology and Heritage Trust on Saturday 9th July in recognition of its rescue and maintenance of the former County Police Station at 4-10 London Road, Bagshot, and its adaptation and use as the Surrey Heath Archaeology Centre. The award was commemorated by the presentation of a plaque by Robert Bryson (Chairman, Surrey Industrial History Group) to Malcolm Henderson (Chairman, Surrey Heath Archaeological and Heritage Trust). The award is the 29th in the series of annual awards made by the Surrey Industrial History Group.

The Surrey Heath Archaeological and Heritage Trust was formed in 1989 from a branch of the Surrey Archaeological Society. It was given a 20-year lease of the Bagshot police station building by the Surrey County Council, at a peppercorn rent (later increased to £300 per annum) while the Trust restored it.

The present building succeeded one built in 1849. It was built on land provided by the Duke of Connaught for use in perpetuity by the police or the county. It contained not only police offices and cells but accommodation for three officers and their families. In 1985 the building was no longer required by the police, and it became very dilapidated. Various grants for the restoration were made, including one from ADAPT (Access for Disabled People to Arts Premises Today). Parts of the old police station are opened to the public on Heritage Days or by appointment. Its history is set out in a booklet published by the Trust and available from the Surrey Heath Museum.

The Trust was awarded a Gulbenkian Award for Museums and Galleries for ‘Most outstanding improvements achieved with limited resources’. It has created an Archaeological Centre with galleries, storage, facilities for the conservation of artefacts, processing rooms, an audio-visual lecture room and a library (now with some 2,000 books). The Trust fosters archaeology in the community, and provides facilities for its Young Archaeologists’ Club (opened by the Duke of Gloucester), for the Camberley U3A, the North-East Hants Historical and Archaeological Society, Duke of Edinburgh awards and various school activities. Several awards have been won for projects (see below for details).

Experimental archaeology has included the construction of an Iron Age round house by the YAC and a working Iron Age loom.

All the work the Trust has done has been carried out voluntarily by its members, using donations and grants, but the work is under threat at present because Surrey County Council is demanding a commercial rent of £10,500.

For further information see www.bagshotvillage.org.uk/tour/arch-ctr.shtml

Many finds have been made in and around Bagshot, including:

- Flint hand-axes and arrow heads.
- An Iron Age and Roman iron-smelting site, yielding 4 tons of slag.
- A gold-plated half-stater from the reign of King Addedomaros (c25 BC).
- 16th century tanning pits, leading on to Roman finds, including a jet ring engraved with a Christian rho-cross symbol (about 400 AD).
- Exotic medieval pottery from France and Spain.
- Surrey/Hampshire Borderware (found also in large quantities in London and exported.)
- Medieval tools, weapons, chain-mail, wood and leather items and ceramics of all periods.
- A hoard of early 17th century English-made Venetian glass, attributed to Mansell.
- Quantities of clay pipes, sufficient to form a reference collection for the dating of finds.

From left to right: Robert Bryson and Malcolm Henderson.
Awards for Archaeology in the community
Graham Webster Laurel Award for education for the public in archaeology Prince's Trust Award for the experimental construction of an Iron Age round house.

PUBLICATIONS

“The Harlow Pottery Industries”
Wally Davey and Helen Walker et al

The Medieval Pottery Research Group’s (MPRG) most recent publication looks at a detailed study of the medieval and early post-medieval pottery industry of Harlow, Essex. The industry is better known for the widely traded, highly decorated 17th-century Metropolitan slipware and this publication provides a scrupulous typology of the forms and decoration as found in the four groups of material studied. Other chapters consider the development of the industries from the medieval, transitional (15th-16th century) periods through to the later, predominantly 17th century: developed redwares and black-glazed wares. This monograph is a remedy to the previous rather slim publication material on the Harlow pottery industries.

The late Wally Davey, the authority on Harlow pottery, brings together the many years of work he spent collecting, recording and researching the products and kilns of this important pottery production centre. Wally was ably assisted in the writing of this monograph by Helen Walker of the Essex County Council Field Archaeology Unit. Together they also discuss the origins, technology and organisation of the industries and make a comparison with other redwares made in Essex and the surrounding counties. Other sections of the publication are provided by Richard Bartlett on the documentary evidence, while Michael Hughes and Alan Vince contributed appendices detailing the petrological and scientific analysis of the clays and glazes.

The publication was funded by English Heritage and supported and encouraged by Harlow Museum.

MPRG are very proud of this publication and highly recommend it to anyone who works in the field of pottery studies, collects ceramics, or has a general interest in the subject and particularly the post-medieval period. Further information may be obtained from the MPRG website: www.medievalpottery.org.uk

ROMAN STUDIES GROUP

EXCURSION TO TRIER AND AACHEN
24th to 28th May 2012

I recently outlined to members of the group an itinerary suggested by Andante Travels for a visit to Trier next year. The quoted price of £575 per person is based on a minimum of twenty, but if this number is exceeded the cost could come down.

As of July 10th fourteen members have committed themselves to coming on the trip, but we need six more to reach the minimum number with only a few weeks to go before reaching the deadline.
In order to give due time to consider whether you, or, indeed, any of your friends would like to come, we have until the end of July as a cut off date (hopefully extending into August-ed). If sufficient numbers enrol by this date, I will forward the cheques to Andante, if not I will return the cheques to you, or destroy them if you give me permission. My address is: Folly Farm, South Holmwood, Dorking, Surrey RH5 4NH.
Tel: 01306 888251
If you want further details please let me know, and if you want to come, please let me have a deposit cheque payable to Andante Travels for £200 per person.
Our likely guide is Professor Anthony King of the University of Winchester:
http://www.barebonestours.co.uk/Guide-Lecturers-tony-king.html. He is a specialist in Roman Gaul and Germany and is the author of the standard work in English (Roman Gaul and Germany) on the subject. He has run research projects in Italy, Turkey and France and is a specialist in the interpretation of faunal remains and samian Ware.
He knows the sites well and has led a number of successful Andante tours.
Intended Itinerary:
Day 1: Travel from the United Kingdom to historic Trier in Germany by private coach.
Day 2: Explore Trier on foot. A chance for you to decide, explore the Imperial town of Constantine: the cathedral, several sets of Imperial baths, amphitheatre and the mighty Roman gate ‘the Porta Nigra’. Or just soak up the atmosphere of this delightful little city on the Moselle.
Day 3: In the morning a possibility to see the Reinisches Landesmuseum, where the rich finds from Roman Trier and its vicinity are on display. An afternoon drive out to the excellent reconstruction of a Roman villa at Borg, the excavated Roman villa at Nennig with its fine mosaics, and a stop at the Igel column, a decorated Roman funerary monument, on the way home.
Day 4: Drive north to Aachen, ancient Aquegrannis, to visit the Palatine chapel of Charlemagne, and the Rathaus (town hall), on the site of his Imperial audience chamber. A chance for you to see the great collections of the cathedral treasury.
Day 5: Drive home to the United Kingdom in our private coach.
The tour will include:
• return travel to Germany and local travel as above in a private air conditioned coach with PA system and seat belts
• 3 nights in the well modernized Romischer Kaiser Hotel adjacent to the Porta Nigra in Trier, including breakfast.
• 1 night in the 4* Hotel Aquis Grana in the heart of Aachen, including breakfast.
• a set of specially prepared field notes with plans, prepared at cost to help you understand the sites for each guest participating.
• tip for the driver
The above quotations assume a party of minimum 20 participants in shared rooms.
There will be a supplement of £120 for single rooms. Below 20 participants the price per person may rise, and below 15 people we may not find this economically viable to organize. If the numbers reach a minimum of 24 there may be cost reductions.
Roman Germany was a frontier province, originally a rude, wild and partial conquest of Julius Caesar which, by the 4th century AD, had grown into one of the pivotal areas of the Western Roman Empire. Its chief city, Trier became one of the capitals of the Empire and surrounding regions, and Britain, Spain and Gaul looked to it for leadership. The rich countryside was dotted with small towns, villas and monuments, and trade was speeded by the presence of the great rivers of the Rhine and Moselle.
Overrun in the 5th century AD by tribes from free Germany, the region regained its importance by the 8th century as the heart of the new Roman Empire of Charlemagne. His capital at Aachen, an ancient Roman spa town, contained grand buildings modelled on Roman styles with materials imported specially from Italy, the core of the old Empire.
Trier is a most attractive city on the Moselle, with a medieval core based on massive Imperial Roman buildings. Lots of cafés and restaurants and of course good wine (and a coach to carry it home...)
The Romischer Kaiser Hotel is situated right next door to the spectacular Porta Nigra and is perfect for exploring Roman Trier. Situated in a fine building of 1895, the hotel has been completely modernised and offers a full range of facilities, restaurant and bar with a pleasant pavement café. Website address: http://www.friedrich-hotels.de
The Aquis Grana Hotel is a stylish modern building right in the heart of ancient Aachen on the edge of the Altstadt and pedestrian area around the cathedral. It has a breakfast restaurant and bar and is located close to a number of Aachen’s many good restaurants. Website address: http://www.hotel-aquis-grana.de
